

Creating Schools with Heart and Soul (Where Students Want to Be)

If we hope to raise achievement levels, we must change the way students experience school. This means being able to create positive emotional experiences for all students and ensuring that they can make meaning of what is being taught. It means touching their hearts and souls as well as their heads.

This workshop will look at school from a student's perspective and show how providing relevance and relationships, as well as rigor, in curriculum and instruction can improve achievement, increase student motivation, and eliminate many student-related concerns confronting today's educators.

Educators who attend this workshop will learn how to

- Engage students in conversations that motivate them to learn and achieve.
- Increase students' self-efficacy, a major correlate of success in school.
- Help students tap into their natural resiliency, enabling them to overcome obstacles that prevent them from succeeding in school.

Who Should Attend?

Anyone seeking new, more effective ways of addressing learning, motivation and achievement. Educators from Navigation 101 schools, and those wishing to increase WASL scores and/or reduce their student failure rate, will find this workshop especially helpful.

About the Presenter: Cal Crow has conducted dozens of workshops in many parts of the world, all designed to help young people use their educational experiences to achieve successful futures. He believes strongly that we can improve learning and motivation by creating programs and activities that positively affect the way students experience school.

Workshop Cost: $149, includes morning refreshments.

Five Clock Hours are available for this workshop

To register, go to <http://www.wois.org/about/events/>

For more information, call Tami Palmer at 1-800-700-WOIS or email tami@wois.org